The Editors of Widening Participation and Lifelong Learning are welcoming new contributions to the journal:

Articles drawing on empirical research, contextualised within current national and international policy debate, which develop the theoretical base of the field or report on significant research projects.

Innovative Practice critical evaluations, which provide a forum for practitioners and researchers to share and discuss specific projects that are either in progress or have been completed.

Research methods articles, selected for their contribution to the analysis and development of research methodology in the fields of widening participation and lifelong learning.

Research notes and updates which provide an opportunity to present interim and final research findings in a quick and accessible way to inform practitioners and researchers in the widening participation and lifelong learning fields.

Reviews of important new publications
